

MEETIC SIGNS EXCLUSIVE PAN-EUROPEAN DEAL WITH AOL

The European leader in online dating will operate all of AOL's online dating chains in Europe

29.10.07, London; Meetic, the European leader in online dating, announces that it has just signed a partnership agreement with AOL Europe, and will thus become its exclusive dating chain for several of the web company's portals throughout Europe. Meetic's services will be available on AOL's European portals and will be offered to all of its Internet users across Europe.

This new agreement, which extends Meetic's partnership to the whole of Europe, completes the previous agreement signed at the start of the year with AOL France. The partnerships already implemented in the United Kingdom and Germany will be renewed, and Meetic will accompany the launch of AOL's dating chains in other European countries: Italy, Spain, Austria, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Meetic's various services will provide AOL's users with a rich, relevant and differentiating online dating offer, while AOL's portals will allow Meetic to reach a wider spread European audience.

"The signing of this agreement shows the efficiency of our collaboration with AOL and the biggest Internet players in Europe. Our partnership strategy is a long-term one, and the extension of these exclusive agreements reflects the quality of our services and their evolution", says Marc Simoncini, CEO of Meetic.

Dana Dunne, CEO AOL Europe says "This is an exciting time for AOL as we continue to grow our business across Europe. I am pleased that our partnership with Meetic will enable them to benefit from AOL's large and sophisticated network. We always strive to offer our users the best internet services and as such I am delighted that our online dating partnership across AOL's 8 European portals will bring even more people together".
