MEETIC SIGNS A DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT WITH AOL FRANCE

The European leader in online dating will now operate the aol.fr portal's "Dating" and "Ideal Partner" chains

Meetic, the European leader in online dating, announces that it has signed a partnership agreement with aol.fr, thus becoming the portal's exclusive dating channel. Meetic and Ulteem's services are now present on aol.fr and are hence available to all of the site's visitors.

This new partnership agreement also comes within the framework of broader collaboration with the Neuf Télécom group, for whom Meetic already operates the neuf.fr dating service.

Within the context of an acceleration in the deployment of its content and the development of its Internet user community, aol.fr has chosen to work with Meetic in order to enable its users to benefit from the dating services of the European and French online dating leader (3.098 million unique visitors in France, Source: Comscore January 2007).

Furthermore, as well as the "Rencontres" (Dating) site that now uses Meetic's services, aol.fr is also creating a new "Partenaire Idéal" (Ideal Partner) site constructed around Ulteem, Meetic's matchmaking service.

The wealth of the offer of the various services operated by Meetic thus makes it possible to jointly provide two sites each suited to aol.fr's different targets and audience structures.

"The signing of this deal with aol.fr illustrates our desire to integrate our services with our partners in a specific and personalised way in order to maximise the efficiency of our cooperation and to make it a long-term commitment", emphasises Philippe Chainieux, Managing Director of Meetic.

Meetic has thus again reaffirmed the momentum of its active partnership policy and its capacity to collaborate with major Internet portals in most European countries.

"This partnership with AOL in France illustrates the increasing appeal of the Meetic brand and our company's capacity to establish service and content agreements with major European Internet players", concludes Marc Simoncini, CEO of Meetic.
